

The AmCham Energy Forum

Wednesday 25th August 2010

The New Zealand Emissions Trading Scheme. Will it work? What can we learn from the experience of similar schemes elsewhere?

Join us to hear a keynote address from Franz Litz, US climate change response strategy expert at the World Resources Institute. Franz will give an insight on lessons that have been learned from other international Emissions Trading Schemes. What have been the outcomes? Were these expected or unexpected? How might they be improved? Franz will then join our panel for an interactive discussion on the implications for New Zealand business.

Franz Litz leads the World Resources Institute's state and regional climate change response efforts and has considerable experience in the design of cap-and-trade programmes. He has played an active role in advising the major regional climate change initiatives in the United States and Canada, as well as a number of individual states.

Panelists:

Franz Litz, Senior Fellow, World Resources Institute

Charles Ewart, Lead Country Manager, Mobil Oil New Zealand

Simon Young, Managing Director, The Karo Group

Facilitated by Paul Callow, Partner, Corporate Finance, Deloitte
